DISCRIMINATION—CONSCIOUS OR UNCONSCIOUS?

By RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

It was an absurd and unworthy implication in one of the local newspapers that Jews might cease their support of local hospitals because of their discriminations against Jewish internes and because of their practical banishment of Jewish girls from their nurses' training schools. Such was not the intention of my editorial. The fact that Jewish physicians are not welcomed in Toronto's hospitals is not at all new, and was a familiar one to all in the Jewish community and to many in the medical profession. Nevertheless, whenever a hospital appealed for help, the Jews responded generously with means and with workers. But last year the Sick Children's Hospital conducted a glorious campaign for a convalescent branch. To that campaign I gave my full and active support, despite the fact that I knew that no Jew or Jewess had ever been accepted as interne or nurse at that institution. I advocated the cause of that hospital from my pulpit, through the editorial columns of THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW, over the radio and from the platform. At the invitation of the campaign committee, I delivered three public addresses in the interest of that campaign, and worked as zealously as any to get the campaign objective. A Jewish team headed by Mr. Harry Rotenberg took a most active part in that drive. Even the children of my religious school made a generous contribution toward it. There was in our minds no thought of limiting our energies and generosities to an institution which was doing great humanitarian work, because some of its officials allowed petty prejudices to master them. It was with the hope that some of the prejudices might be overcome that my editorial was written.

Despite the formal denials of the heads of hospitals, facts are facts and I repeat the assertion that there are no male Jewish internes in Toronto's hospitals. The one referred to in the Western Hospital is serving but for the summer months, and his is an interim and not a permanent appointment. May I ask the heads of the hospitals why it is that of all the Jewish graduates from Toronto University's medical college, not one is appointed as an interne in a local hospital? Is it because all these men, most of whom plan to practice in Toronto, do not want such interneships?

The facts are well known to Jewish physicians as they are well known throughout the medical profession. Let us be frank and candid about them. Jewish physicians have been tabooed at Toronto's hospitals. Is that an unpleasant allegation? To be sure it is, for us as well as for the hospitals. The way to overcome that is not by denying the allegation, but by correcting the situation which impels it. It is certainly unfair to the Jewish physicians, whose opportunities are limited, and to the public, who are deprived of their services. A narrow petty policy does not harmonize with the humanitarian service a hospital renders.

There are in Toronto young Canadians of the Jewish faith, graduates of the medical college, who would welcome an opportunity to serve the Toronto public and to perfect themselves. They have all the qualifications to make good internes and splendid physicians. All we ask is that some of these be given a chance in Toronto's hospitals

MENACHEM USSISCHKIN

This week Toronto Jewry was honoured by the visit of one of the greatest Jews of the present generation—Menachem Ussischkin. Ussischkin is recognized as the "strong man" of the Zionist movement. He is a man of unbending determination and uncompromising courage. In the midst of shifting values and vacillating tendencies he stands firm, rooted in profound convictions, fighting for abiding ideas in Jewish life. Like all strong personalities he is blessed with a host of bitter enemies as well as staunch friends.

The Zionist movement is steadily growing poorer in the material of leadership. It attracts new men who make excellent managers, directors, departmental heads or financial backers. It does not attract the type of men who can be designated as leaders. For leadership requires vision, sweep of imagination, broad range of knowledge, insight into the main sources of human conduct and sympathetic appreciation of the idiosyncrasies of human nature. If a man is to lead a mass of people, he must understand them and be able to interpret the purport and significance of their being. He must discern the fundamental note in the rhythm of their life, and lead them to a fuller and richer expression of their major tendencies.

Zionism in its original formulation was an attempt at the appraisal of the meaning of Jewish life. The early Zionists were men whose motivating force issued from the primal sources of Jewish values. They were men of intense natures. The pulse of Jewish life, which beats sluggishly in the commonalty of Jewdom, reverberated with multiplied vigor in their beings, and they loomed in the eyes of their fellows as tremendous personalities, rich in the qualities which make Jewish existence significant. Pinsker, Ahad Ha'am, Smolenskin, Herzl, Nordau—men on whose brows perched the shekinah—they could inspire their followers and fire them with a passion for their ideal.

Present-day Zionism is now mainly under the thumb of American leadership. We need but glance at the names of the heads of American Zionism to realize the decadence of the movement. True, Zionism needs money. In America there is a good field for money-raising. And the money-collectors are at the top of the organization. But these plate-rattlers are not leaders. They cannot read a national soul; they do not appreciate historic tendencies; they are not alive to the significance of a people's cultural struggle. They envisage Zionism as a species of charity. They are philanthropy-mongers. Palestine is to them a glorified version of a Jewish old folks' home or orphans' asylum. They are excellent managers, directors, bankers. They are not leaders.

Well, Ussischkin is one of the few leaders we still have left in Zionism. To him Jewish life is a manifestation of an historic process. It is not an accident. And his Zionism is an effort to adjust the process along the lines of its destined course. Zionism is an exercise in cultural salvation. And he is one of the few leaders who have remained loyal to their ideals. He does not compromise. There were occasions recently when his decapitation was asked for by some of the American "deficiency experts." But Ussischkin is too firmly entrenched in the affections of an immense following,

PHILIP GUEDALLA RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF ENGLISH ZIONIST FEDERATION

At five minutes past eleven on Sunday night, June 26, 300 delegates at the Annual Conference of the English Zionist Federation heard the result of the Presidential election, for which they had been waiting all day.

As announced in our columns last week, the conference opened at the Hotel Russell at 10 a.m., without the President. Mr. Philip Guedalla had decided to avoid the possibility of having his office contested, and his place had to be taken by the Rev. J. K. Goldbloom. But Mr. Goldbloom found the younger elements too obstreperous, and he thought it necessary to send for Mr. Guedalla, whose brisk manner made it clear that he had come against his will. Under his imperious rulings, opportunities for noisy interludes, for charges against the administration of the Federation, and for the need of divisions—which had characterized the proceedings of the morning session—became fewer. The climax in the day's events came in the evening when Mr. Joseph Cowen and Mr. Philip Guedalla openly entered the hustings. The conference forgot its partisanship, and enjoyed the spectacle of a contest, and the verbal battle between the contestants. The partisanship reasserted itself, however, when the result became known—Mr. Guedalla, 119 votes; Mr. Cowen, 81 votes. The numerous 'Young Zionists' were partially consoled, however, when it became known that the Rev. M. L. Perlzwig had succeeded Mr. Adolph Ludlow as honour secretary, and when Mr. Cowen, at Mr. Guedalla's suggestion, consented to join the new executive.

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A HOLIDAY IN MUSKOKA

You Will Talk About It for a Year After

Get away from the cities with business and hustle. Take the train to Muskoka Lakes, swim in their waters, enjoy the multitude of outdoor sports Muskoka provides and come back with enough vigour and "pep" to last a whole year. We will help you to arrange for comfortable accommodation and tell you the best places to visit. Just ask any Canadian National Railways Agent; he knows all about the district. And by the way, don't forget your golf clubs and tennis racket.

"THE CONFEDERATION"

Toronto-Vancouver Fast Train Sure to Be Popular

"The Confederation," Canadian National's new train between Toronto and Vancouver, is making a host of friends with across-continent travellers.

The personal attention given, the dining service and the equipment, all have earned favourable comment from people who expect the highest grade service.

The train leaves Toronto every night at 9.00 p.m., Eastern Standard time, and arrives in Vancouver at 3.00 in the afternoon of the fourth day.

Tickets and full information regarding this train may be obtained from any Canadian National Agent.

LAKE OF BAYS

A Happy Mixture of Sun and Fine and Water

Lake of Bays is the holiday ground of the vacationist. Those who want a real out-of-doors holiday know they will find it in this country of crystal lakes and shady forests. All aquatic sports may be enjoyed to the full—golf and tennis too. Splendid accommodation is provided by Bigwin Inn, in the heart of the district, and by numerous hotels, cottages and farm-houses throughout the district. An interesting booklet has been prepared especially for Lake of Bays. A copy is yours for the asking. Any Canadian National Railways Agent will give you one, and any information you require.

MANDATES COMMISSION ON PALESTINE POSITION

The Mandates Commission of the League of Nations, now in session at Geneva, has had before it the memorandum presented by the Zionist organization, acting in behalf of the Jewish Agency, with a covering letter by Dr. Weizmann, the memorandum of the Palestine-Arab Committee and the memorandum of the British Government, the Mandatory Power for Palestine. The Zionist organization goes into a detailed statement of the present conditions in the country, under the headings of Immigration, Colonization, Urban Development, Industry, Public Health, Education, Finance and the Jewish Agency. The Jewish population in Palestine on September 1, 1926, numbered approximately 158,000, or 17.6 per cent. of a total population of 887,000, as compared with 83,794 or 11.1 per cent., of a total population of 747,182 at the census of October, 1922. The growth of the population is ascribed mainly to the excess of immigration over emigration, though this excess in 1926 was less than in 1924 and 1925. The net Jewish immigration in 1926 was 13,056 as compared with 33,801 in 1925, 12,856 in 1924 and 7,420 in 1923. The total net Jewish immigration since the war, exclusive of prewar residents returning to their homes in Palestine, is approximately 72,000.

The total number of Jewish agricultural settlements in Palestine is over 120, of which 41 are under the direct control of the Zionist Organization. During the year eight settlements which had been receiving grants from the Keren Hayesod have become independent. About 43,000 dunams of land have been acquired by the National Fund and the American Zion Commonwealth during the year. Urban development, however, has fallen down below the growth in previous years. The industries also have shown some decline during the year, which increased the number of unemployed.

The Hadassah Medical Organization maintained its institutions in full activity. A municipal hospital is being erected by the township of Tel Aviv, in conjunction with the Hadassah organization, and two infant welfare clinics were opened by Hadassah in Tel Aviv, bringing the total number of clinics under its control to fifteen. In the field of education too there was but slight abatement during the year. While five institutions were given up for economic and other reasons, more than thirty others were added. The number of pupils in the schools under the supervision of the Zionist Organization is now almost as large as in all the Government schools in the country.

The memorandum concludes with a summary of the activities of Dr. Weizmann in behalf of the organization of the Jewish Agency and with the understanding reached by him with the Marshall group in this country.

The report of the British Government directs attention to the present unsatisfactory state of the economic situation. It points out that the element of time is perhaps the most essential element in the bringing about of a successful Jewish settlement in Palestine. It urges the need of consolidation and intensification of the position already acquired without entering upon new enterprises at present. With regard to the question as to what measures are being taken by the Mandatory Power to secure the establishment of the Jewish National Home in Palestine, the memorandum says that the good government which it aims to create in Palestine, making no distinction among races and creeds, will develop that favourable position for the Jews, ultimately resulting in making Palestine their homeland.

In anticipation of the fifteenth Zionist Congress, which will be held in Basle on August 30, the opposition forces have begun to show increased activity. The Revisionists have held meetings and conferences and their demands were given wide publicity. A severe arraignment of the Executive Committee by Deputy Isaac Gruenbaum appears in the current issue of the Jewish Chronicle, as well as a letter of criticism and advice by Jacob de Haas of this country.

RABBI STEPHEN S. WISE SPEAKS FROM CHRISTIAN PULPIT IN PARIS

The precedent of a Jew addressing an audience of Jews and Christians from the pulpit of a Christian church was established in Paris on July 10, when Rabbi Stephen Wise, of New York, delivered the regular Sunday sermon in the American Church there, upon the invitation of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Wilson Cochran.

"This is not unusual in our country," said Rabbi Wise, "but I believe it is the first time a Jew has spoken from a Christian pulpit in Europe." The sermon dealt with the common traditions and common bases of Judaism and Christianity and with the points of disagreement, which he attributed not to the religious but rather to the Jew and Christian, "who morally have the same ideals and the same foundations, but differ theologically," he said.

Rabbi Wise's peroration was a plea for tolerance between Jew and Christian, which he said was now arising in America and spreading to other countries.

Following the sermon, Rabbi Wise declined to comment upon Henry Ford's retraction of the attacks against Jews in The Dearborn Independent. "That is something I cannot discuss until I have more information and have studied the matter," he said.

Hundreds of Jews added to the visitors and the regular congregation packed the church to overflowing.

ABRAHAM CAHAN IN RUSSIA

Abraham Cahan, editor-in-chief of The Jewish Daily Forward of New York, arrived in Moscow, Russia, on July 5, and proposes to spend upwards of ten weeks in visiting the Jewish colonies in South Russia and other points of interest.

He said to a reporter that his reception had been quite friendly and that his liberty of movement was unrestricted. He did not share the anxiety of some of his old friends and believed the Soviety was in no wise hostile to an honestly objective critic.

He added that he came to Russia with an open mind to judge conditions for himself exactly as he found them. As he was born in Russia, is has an unusual opportunity for comparison.

WRITING OF MOSES REPORTED FOUND

Discoveries which may shed sensational light on long-disputed questions of Biblical history have just been made in Asia Minor by Professor Kirsopp Lake, head of a Harvard-Michigan expedition to Mount Sinai.

From Professor Lake, now at Cairo, came the terse cable message that he had brought back from the mountain fastnesses across the Red Sea newfound fragments of the mysterious "Sinai Inscriptions."

These inscriptions, according to Harvard authorities, are stone carvings, the first of which were dug up more than twenty years ago on Mount Sinai, the ancient peak where Moses received the tablets of the law and where many of the great secrets of human races and religion are believed to lie buried.

Such of the Sinai inscriptions as are already in the hands of scientists have been studied for years, but their characters are in a long-forgotten language which has yielded only slightly to translation. If Professor Lake's "fragments," fitted into existing gaps, should make the incariptions readable as a whole, it is possible, say archeologists, that the baffling characters would throw new light on the life of Moses, the history of the Bible and the origin of modern languages.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW,

The extraordinary and obviously unconvincing statements attributed to Henry Ford in his explanation of his changed attitude toward the Jewish people, the suddenness of his complete change of front and his thinly-veiled pretence of innocence as regards attacks on Jewry, that have been appearing in the Dearborn Independent for the last few years, should at least serve as a warning to American Jews and prevent them from being beguiled into believing Ford sincere in his apologies and retractions, which are probably an exceedingly bold attempt to escape the responsibility for the wrongs he has done, and caused to be done through others, to the Jewish race, if they do not, with perfectly good reason, serve as an insult to their common intelligence. The fact that Ford bluntly denies that he was aware of anything in the nature of attacks on the Jews in his journals, in the face of all evidence to the contrary, shows that Ford is not sincere in his apology and in his retractions. For that reason Jews cannot and should not "forgive and forget," nor should Ford's high financial standing influence them in that direction.

Yours sincerely,
S. A. KORENBERG, M.D.
Montreal, July 15.

ADMITTED AS NOTARY

Solomon Vineberg, Ph.D., was admitted as notary public of the Province of Quebec at the examinations held recently at Quebec by the Board of Notaries. Dr. Vineberg took an active part in the preparatory work in connection with the formation of Federation, of which he was honorary secretary and executive secretary. He has held positions in settlement work in New York and Cleveland. He graduated from the faculty of law at McGill University and was admitted to the practice of law in 1916. Mr. Vineberg will practice in Montreal.

SOL WEBER

At the recent bar examinations held in Quebec City, Sol Weber, of Montreal, led in commercial, criminal and Roman law, and in civil procedure. Mr. Weber is an honour graduate in economics and political science from McGill University, having graduated in 1924 with the degree of bachelor of arts. He took his law course both at McGill University and at the Université de Montréal, from which latter institution he graduated in May of this year with the degree of master of law. Mr. Weber has already been admitted as a member of the bar of the Province of Quebec.

The British Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews spent the sum of $300,000 during 1926. The work of the society was carried on in fourteen countries. No data are given as to the number of Jewish converts during the same period.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancour
That for what it cost me to be free
I might have had an anchor."

Rabbi Louis I. Newman, of Temple Emanu-El, San Francisco, for the second time in three years Fourth of July orator at the civic exercises held under the auspices of the city, in speaking of the achievements of American airmen, including Charles A. Levine, said: "Even as our airmen have vindicated the unity of our races and faiths within America, so may they bring to pass unity among the nations of mankind whose frontiers their flights have annihilated. The free air of the skies can help free men from fear of their brothers." Et cetera! Rabbi Newman, one of the highest paid rabbis in the American pulpit, is the gentleman who wrote to the Review among other papers about a column he writes on Jewish affairs. "If I can secure the interest of a sufficient number of Jewish periodicals to make this worth while," said the rabbi, "I can offer the column to you each week for a year at $5 a week. If you are interested in receiving a column for use only in your periodical or a column of book reviews, I can offer either to you for one year at $10." Evidently it takes a man who, with a straight face, can call Levine an "airman," to speak so lightly of $5 and $10 per week, either one being a fortune, especially in the Jewish column-writing business. If he were really a good business man he would make some arrangement with the Jewish papers by which they would print his stuff in news type at regular advertising rates . . . At the twelfth annual convention of the Rabbinical Assembly of the Jewish Theological Seminary at Asbury Park, N.J., Rabbi Max Drob, the president, told his hearers that "above all, it should be our task to restore the sanctity of the Jewish home and to resist every effort to tamper with the divine institution of marriage." . . . At the recent American Zionist convention in Atlantic City where the opposition was defeated by an overwhelming vote in favor of Louis Lipsky and the administration, it was the Zionist hymn, "Hatikvah" which, instead of argument, was used to silence objections . . . And so it goes in America.

"Israel's Messenger," of Shanghai, China, has published a special issue in honour of the donation of Beth Aharan Synagogue to the Jewish community by Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hardoon. It contains congratulations from Jews, of course: Rabbi David de Sola Pool, of New York City; Rev. Dr. Haham Moses Gaster, of London, England; Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein, of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, and others. More interesting are the messages from the president of the Hindosthan Society, from officers of the Asiatic Society, from the Muslim community of Shanghai, and the International Institute of China. The Hardoons made their gift of the synagogue when it seemed impossible for the community itself ever to find land cheap enough for the site. Finally Mrs. Hardoon gave $160,000 for the land and the cost of constructing the synagogue came to $150,000, also her gift. Mr. Hardoon is a native of Bagdad. He came to China from India in 1873 in the service of the Sassoons. Mr. and Mrs. Hardoon spent a large sum of money to publish a complete set of 1,000 volumes of the Buddhist canon for distribution. The classical works were distributed to universities all over the world, including the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and the Indian one founded by Tagore. The Hardoons also got out two sets of books, including history, classics, poetry, painting, sculpture, and professional arts and crafts. They established an institute of education at St. Chings's College and the annual expenditure of several thousand dollars was paid by them. They founded the Old Men's Association for aged persons and the Kwang-Chong Literary Society where the learned could study. The Hardoons have given enormous sums of money to save more than one hundred thousand Chinese from starvation in flood, drought and famine areas. Mr. Hardoon holds the highest decorations from the Chinese government ever bestowed on non-Chinese citizens for his philanthropic deeds. Congratulations from the non-Jews over the donation of the synagogue are full of gratitude for gifts which they have received many times. I.I.C.

JULY 22, 1927 VOLUME VIII, NUMBER 39

Social Life in 1903— Do You Remember?—

At the bazaar given by the Ladies' Hebrew Benevolent Society, Miss Freeman and Miss Reuben read palms. Mrs. A. D. Schwersenski, Mrs. S. J. Goldstein, and the Misses Goldstein and Schwersenski sold cushions. The following raised $500 by selling advertising in the bazaar "Gazette": Mrs. Clarence I. De Sola, Mrs. J. S. Leo, A. A. Sandeman, R. Goltman, D. Goldberg, D. Levy, Misses A. Samuel, E. Albert, F. Michalson, Rill, S. Myers, Pauline Levine, S. Simon, B. Morris, Louisa De Sola, Dorothy Leo and Mesdames H. Vineberg, W. Albert and Meldola De Sola distributed copies at the bazaar. A speaker at the bazaar said that "never before in Montreal were so many beautiful young ladies seen together at a public function and if there should be numerous unions of heart and hands later, the bazaar would deserve credit for having aided in bringing about these happy consummations." I. Friedman was auctioneer. D. S. Friedman was chairman of the finance committee and treasurer. Executive committee of the first annual grand concert and ball of the Y.M.H.A.: Dr. Lightstone, J. J. Samuels, L. Caplan, D. Levinson, A. Coppelman, M. Levitt and L. Caplan. Israel Zangwill, the author, was married to Edith Ayrton, in London, England. W. Samuels, of Quebec, was in Montreal. Mrs. C. Miller, of Toronto, was the guest of Mrs. Abraham Monis, Tupper Street, Westmount. Mrs. I. Benowick and family returned from Detroit. Mrs. Oppenheim and daughter, of New York, visited Mrs. Silverstone, Hutchison Street. Mrs. Maurice David gave a bridge party. Mrs. Hyman and daughters, of Cleveland, visited Mrs. M. Vineberg, Bishop Street. Mrs. Lyon Silverman recovered from an operation. M. A. Vineberg recovered from a serious illness. Mrs. William Goldstein, of Toronto, visited her mother, Mrs. Hyman, and her sister, Mrs. J. Youngheart, Crescent Street. Mr. and Mrs. Z. Wener and Mrs. Samuel Hart went to New York to attend the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Harris. Mrs. S. D. Binge was in the city for the marriage of Miss Juliette Harris. At the Montefiore Club smoke talk John Michaels presided and the subject for discussion was: "Should Canada Have Treaty Making Powers?" The conclusion arrived at was that the question was premature under present conditions. A surprise masquerade party was given in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Goldstein, St. Matthew Street. Maxwell Goldstein, K.C., spoke on "The Laws and Customs of Canada" to students at the Baron de Hirsch Institute.

MEAFORD

The wedding was solemnized in Oddfellows' Temple, at 7.30 p.m., Wednesday, June 29, of Gertrude, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.S. Ciglen, and M. J. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Miller, of Montreal. As the bridal party entered the hall and approached the silken canopy of blue and white, beneath which the ceremony was performed by Rabbi Berger, of Toronto, and Cantor Herman, the four bridesmaids and ushers formed an arch through which the bride, on her father's arm, and the groom with his mother, followed by the bride's mother and groom's father, the maid of honour and best man, passed, the small flower girl scattering rose petals in their way. The bride wore ivory crepe romaine with Spanish lace and rhinestones, with clusters of flowers at the shoulder and corsage. Her veil was worn in Juliet cap effect and caught with orange blossoms. The shower bouquet was of Sweetheart roses, lilies-of-the-valley and maidenhair fern. Miss Faye Samuels, of Toronto, the maid of honour, wore shell pink crepe romaine, embroidered. Her flowers were tea roses, lilies-of-the-valley and fern. Misses Bebe Litman, of Toronto, was in a period frock of rose taffeta and black tulle; Rae Ciglen, the bride's sister, rose taffeta and three-toned tulle, in period style; Sarah Siminovitch, of Montreal, white crepe romaine embroidered in crystals and rhinestones; and Lillian Topp, of Collingwood, wore canary chiffon with canary and rose net and French flowers. The bridesmaids' bouquets were of American Beauty roses, lilies-of-the-valley and fern, and they wore bandeaux about their hair, of similar design, in shades to match their frocks. The flower girl, Miss Muriel Bain, of Owen Sound, a niece of the bride, was in coral georgette and over her arm she carried her poke bonnet also of coral georgette, filled with roses and sweet peas. Nat Laurie, of Montreal, was best man and the ushers were Sam Ciglen, of Toronto; Sam Miller, Montreal; Myer Miller, Montreal, and Lou Nadler, Montreal. Mrs. W. J. McQuinn played the wedding music. A reception was held in the assembly hall of the Temple, the parents of the bride and groom receiving with them two hundred guests. Mrs. Ciglen wore a black crepe romaine gown with gold trimming and black hat and a corsage bouquet of American Beauty roses. The groom's mother was wearing a black dress embroidered in gold and rhinestones, black hat and American Beauty roses. Mrs. H. Bain, the bride's sister, was in a frock of black sequins and red rhinestones, with corsage of roses. Mrs. A. Levine, of Hanover, another sister of the bride, wore a black period frock of taffeta. Mrs. I. Miller, of Montreal, was in maize georgette and the groom's sister, Mrs. M. Schwartz, of Montreal, was in an ivory gown with shell pink tulle and rhinestone trimming. Misses Bessie Miller, in mauve georgette beaded in rhinestones, Lillian Miller, green georgette in bouffant style, Freda Miller, mauve taffeta, bouffant style, Gertie Miller, powder blue georgette, and Irene Miller, pink georgette, are sisters of the groom. The tables from which the wedding dinner was served were in rose and white, the bride's table being centred by the three-storey wedding cake. Orchestra. The toast to the bride was proposed by Irving Samft, of Montreal. For travelling, the bride wore a dress of black and plaid canton crepe with hat to match and navy coat embroidered in white, and grey shoes and stockings, and the smart hand bag which she carried was of black and plaid leather, the colours matching her dress. Miss Faye Samuels, of Toronto, caught the bride's bouquet. The couple are motoring through the United States on their honeymoon trip and will live in Toronto. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. I. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. M. Schwartz, Misses Bessie, Lillian, Freda, Gertie and Irene Miller, Miss Ethel Aarnson; and Herman H. Harris, Mendel Lecker, Dave Kleinberg, Ben Nadler, Geo. Fine, Irving Samft, Sam Backer, Al. Malinoff, of Montreal; Mrs. A. Levine Mrs. J. Sklar, Mrs. J. Thuna, Miss M. CAMP BNAI BRITH

Over 300 visitors were present at the official opening, Sunday, July 10, of Camp Bnai Brith, Keswick, Ont., the camp for Jewish boys sponsored by the Bnai Brith and supported in large part by Federation. The events of the day included nailing the m'zuzoh to the door-post of the dining pavilion, raising the Union Jack and the Jewish flag, a baseball game between the Bnai Brith and camp supervisors, and field sports by the boys of the camp. Innovations and improvements have been installed. The large new dining pavilion has now a wooden floor, instead of a mess tent spread over the bare ground as formerly. There is an up-to-date kitchen with running water piped over 500 feet from an artesian well, sunk ninety feet, two large dish-washing tanks with running water, and a large concrete ice-box tank, kept at forty degrees by a continued flow of cold water from the well, and drain pipes. All the sleeping tents now have wooden floors, and in addition there is a large marquee tent accommodating forty boys, also with wooden floor, and a bunk and drawer for each boy. The camp is under the direction of M. M. Cohen, camp director, and Martin Cohn, chief counsellor. Camp mothers are Mesdames M. M. Cohen, J. Cohn and I. Markus.

Camp committee responsible for improvements and management are: Isadore Markus, chairman; Harry Rosenthal, vice-chairman; M. G. Cohen, treasurer; R. Raphael, S. Kaufman, J. Singer, M. Levy, H. Rotenberg, J. A. Woolf.

Of the last group of 115 boys, 90 per cent. who could not swim knew the rudiments of swimming by the time they left camp, due to the efforts of Senior Swimming Councillor Kopman and his assistants, Councillors Garbe, Palter, Laporter. The camp staff consists of M. M. Cohen, chief councillor, Martin Cohen, and the following councillors, N. B. Pearlston, P. Kopman, W. Garbe, D. Palter, E. Fagan, B. Davis, H. Silverberg, F. W. Fine, A. E. Sutin, N. Laporter, and S. Cohen.

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

The attraction at Shea's Hippodrome next week will be five famous Keith-Albee super-vaudeville acts. The picture presentation will be "The Climbers" with Irene Rich. The background for the opening chapters is the Spain of the early nineteenth century, when the throne of King Ferdinand VII was endangered by political intrigue. Spain in America yields the environment for later sequences. Miss Rich is seen as the Duchess of Aragon. Forrest Stanley, who plays the leading male role, is used as the tool in the plot. Flobelle Fairbanks, Clyde Cook, Myrna Loy, Nigel Barrie, Martha Franklin and Dot Farley are others.

BRIDGE WINNERS

A bridge, given by Mrs. I. Corb, in honour of her winning the Chesterfield suite raffled by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Mount Sinai Hospital, was attended by Mesdames I. Fox, B. Forer, I. Epstein, M. Corb, F. Dancyger, M. Covant, I. Hornick, H. Dworkin, Olamas (of the Vilna Troupe), Kamarna, Granatstein, Rum, I. Hoffman, Valikoff, J. Glickman, R. Shapiro, Dunkelman, Goldberg, Goodman, L. Fink, Lawrence, Caplan, and Misses Reba Corb, Gertrude Corb, Rea and Sophie Aarons. Speakers were Mrs. Goodman, Mrs. S. Hoffman, H. Dworkin, R. Shapiro and I. Corb.

who cherish his strength of character and sound idealism, to be easily removed. To-day he stands out as one of the very few surviving leaders of the older school—the men who made Zionism an ideal to inspire and elevate the Jewish nation.

MAURICE CODY

The drowning of Maurice Cody, only son of Rev. Dr. Cody, has aroused a feeling of genuine sorrow in the Jewish community where the distinguished father is known and respected.

The son had a wide acquaintance in Jewish student and legal circles, and his rare ability and qualities of character have made him deservedly popular. We offer our sympathy to the stricken family.—A.B.B.

JEWS PROMINENT IN GERMAN COMMERCE

A new German "Directory of Directors" has just been pubished which includes a number of names of Jews who have been most active in the industrial and financial life of Germany. Jacob Goldschmidt is a director of ninety-six companies. Mr. Goldschmidt is also interested in the promotion of Jewish learning and has recently undertaken to privide the funds needed for the publication of a Jewish Encyclopedia in German. Mr. Curt Sobernheim is a director in fifty-nine companies, being chairman of seven and vice-chairman of six. Dr. M. Kempner is on the board of fifty-one companies. Mr. Carl Furstenburg is director of fifty companies.

Rabbi Isserman's Editorial

There are in Toronto also Jewish girls who can meet all the qualifications of the most rigid nurses' training schools, and who desire to make nursing their profession. Why compel these girls to go out of their native city and native country? All we ask and that a justice-loving public asks is that these girls be given a chance in Toronto's many fine hospitals.

Toronto's hospitals have a splendid reputation. They are doing magnificent humanitarian work. They are serving the public without distinction of class and creed. Poor or rich, Jew or Christian, Catholic or Protestant, who are in pain and agony, can receive relief from them. All classes of our citizenry appreciate their work, and I would be the last to utter any word which would in any way diminish their support. But consciously or unconsciously, they have discriminated against Jewish servants, against Jewish physicians and nurses. Do we ask too much when we call this to the attention of the officials in charge and appeal to their sense of justice to remedy the situation?

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

JEWISH VOTE IN ROUMANIA DIVIDED

The arrangement entered into between the Union of Rumanian Jews, through its representative, Dr. Filderman, with the Liberal Party, has apparently fallen to the ground and on the eve of the elections a manifesto was issued to Jewish voters to vote for whomsoever they will, since it was impossible to obtain a general agreement among the various factions in Jewry. The early returns of the elections indicated a complete victory for Bratianu and the Liberal Party. Neither of the two anti-Semitic groups succeeded in obtaining seats in Parliament.

Rumanian newspapers have recently disclosed the fact that it was Goga, the Minister of the Interior in the Averescu Cabinet, who was responsible for the anti-Jewish agitation, and who openly supported the anti-Semitic groups. It is asserted that Cuza would never have been able to get into Parliament without the aid given to him by Goga. On the other hand, Professor Jorga, the notorious anti-Semite, accused the Liberal Party of unethical conduct in joining hands with the Jews, since the Liberal Party has always been anti-Semitic in its policy and their promises to the Jews now are made because of political expediency and will probably not be carried out.

The new Rumanian Cabinet has granted an amnesty to all military offenders since the war, among whom is also a large number of Jews who had been in prison for several years on the charge of desertion and espionage. The Government also obtained the consent of the authorities of the Bucharest University to allow the Jewish students who were prevented from taking their examinations because of the anti-Semitic terror to take their examinations now.

The College Generation

By Professor Abraham L. Sachar, of the University of Illinois

Since the war the American college student has become a favorite subject of abuse. The press thunders at him, the pulpit storms, and many a clever novelist has reaped the rich harvest that goes with popularity by baring the mysterious intimacies of college life. Students, they all say in chorus, flit thoughtlessly through four years of jazz and the worship of brute strength. They are masters in the art of wasting time and effort and money. Their life is one long dash for dates; they are pleasure mad, sex crazed. Studies are hours designed to give them an excuse for coming onto a campus. Texts are mere pretexts. Where there are fraternities and sororities, life is emptier, interwoven with snobbishness and jealousies and silliness. Fraternities are organizations, clans rather, which men are permitted to join on condition that they become servile to their brothers. Similarity means a common devotion to cheap ideals, to clothes and parties; it means contempt for other fraternity or non-fraternity men of lesser social standing.

Obviously such students can have no serious interests; books bring to their mind the begoggled grind, a despicable term in college parlance. Religion leaves them cold. The average student is an irreverent, irreligious spendthrift, interested largely in his physical well-being, influenced by what is clever, racy, and not very profound. His conversation fluctuates between athletics and sex.

Unfortunately, these damning impressions come not only from laymen of sensationalists, who mistake exaggeration for vigour and indecent quotation for realism. Men who have spent their lives in the academic world join in the chorus of denunciation. They, too, believe that a university is no longer a nursery of ideas, but a mausoleum. An Illinois professor recently defined a campus as several thousand acres without an idea. From Harvard comes the definition of American education as the process leading from an infantile vacuum to an adolescent void. From still another source we have the principle that the student mind is capable of infinite resistance to the introduction of any useful knowledge.

The charges have not remained unchallenged. A chivalrous army of apologists has arisen to defend the morals and interests of the maligned student. We are now riding, I think, the tide of the reaction in favour of the student. The onslaughts, we are told, are grossly unfair. They are based on the superficialities of college life. There is, to be sure, less discipline to-day, but there is less cant and hypocrisy too. There is less obedience, but there is less maudlin, mushy sentimentality. There is more waywardness, but it has in it a genuine spirit which keeps it healthy. There is more impertinence, but it breaks into some of the shell-backed propriety which deadens the soul. The superficial, cynical, carefree attitude that is so typical of the student does not, even at its worst, represent all of his interests, certainly not his deeper, serious feelings. It is often a pose, a mood, and it is not incompatible with keenness, with intellectual honesty, with earnestness with a generous spirit.

There are probably more drones buzzing about in the halls of our colleges to-day than ever before. For the colleges, with their impressive social features and spectacular athletic programmes, have become very attractive to young people who should never have left the farm or the store. Thousands of families, too, have risen to wealth in the last decade, have flooded the universities with children who come without background, without culture, interested only in enjoying themselves. Many students drift in without knowing why; many are dragged in for the same reason. There are always places for them in institutions where the trustees measure the strength and efficiency of the college by the numbers who attend, and who, consequently, lower the standard sufficiently to accommodate the precious offspring of every righteous citizen. All this vulgarization of the American university is seriously undermining its usefulness. Nicholas Murray Butler had to remind us recently that we are in danger of developing a mass product, rotten with moral cowardice, and riddled with the instincts of the herd.

Yet in the startling increase in numbers which has doubled the population of our greatest universities, there are also more of the better kind of students, as capable and earnest as any of the former generations. Many get lost in the shuffle or are trampled upon by the herd. But there are enough to form a powerful minority with courage sufficient to resist the vulgarization and cheapening of American student life. Such a minority there has always been. In the confusion of conflicting opinions, then, one may well believe that the college to-day is no better and no worse than it has been. It is simply receiving greater prominence because more people are interested in it.

It is not so easy, however, to remain complacent in face of the charge that there is a growing number of students who are becoming very indifferent to religious appeals, who are shifting their whole religious balance. We used to be very indulgent towards college cynicism; intellectual measures, we called it. Every student gets them and most of them recover. The student must go through the usual Sturm and Drang period, especially since the war, when it has become fashionable to be plastic material in the world, to follow will-o'-the-wisp fashion, without being too careful about direction.

I wonder if we can make the same answer to-day. Are we not blinking deliberately in the face of a new situation when we take such a smug, conservative view of the student's religious reactions? We may say it is only the measles and wait for the student to recover; we may make the same gentle answers of former days and turn away his doubt. The patronizing attitude is the line of least resistance. Or we may say perhaps what the student feels is the symptom of something deeper; perhaps he is the barometer of the general spiritual unrest; he is asking very serious questions, very pertinent questions; it is worth while taking advantage of his curiosity to help him meet his perplexities honestly so that he may develop a chastened reformulated faith.

It is the very exceptional type who painfully makes his way through to intellectual irreligion. The average serious student is just vaguely restless. Whatever the cause, the tendency of opposition is there, and it keeps growing. The student is not ready to follow the first piper. He has to be won. He has to be convinced that he ought to be influenced before he will submit to influence.

With the Jewish youth the problem is complicated further. The serious student is usually as curious, as questioning as other students, perhaps more so. It seems to be a Jewish talent to doubt. But he is more difficult to sway by religious appeals because it is usually no asset to be actively identified with Jewish interests. He will not deny his faith, he will not be aggressively antagonistic to it. But he wishes to be left alone. It is enough to be a Jew and to suffer for it socially without adding further burdens that may easily be avoided. At least half the Jewish students who enroll in the universities state no religious preference on their registration slips. The Jewish student must, therefore, be weaned from the religious indifference common to his type, and he must also be influenced to break away from the prejudice which makes him unwilling to identify himself with a Jewish group.

Of course, every community has similar problems. Young men and women are very much the same in university and out. There is no particular university religious viewpoint. But a large number of Jewish students brought together on a campus gives a peculiar slant to the problem. Fraternities and sororities on one side, and unorganized students on the other, live in two different worlds. It is difficult for a layman to appreciate the height and breadth of the fence that separates them. Their narrowness is so intense that one wonders whether there is not the belief among some of them that God is a fraternity man. Finally, there are the usual orthodox and reform divisions, bringing out the usual religious differences—these are usually subordinate—but social difference as well. Your place on the campus is governed, like the new immigration bill, by your father's country of origin.

This, then, is the usual Jewish situation on a campus. Not every student is destined to become a leader. There are drones and there are workers, there are students with petty interests and students who respond to every worthwhile call. There is a majority destined to become average citizens in every trade and every profession whose loyalty is very important. And there is a keen, virile minority, the finest human quarry in the world. They can be molded into effective leaders for the communities into which they are destined to go. They are bright; there is no brighter type, none so quick to scent the difference between reality and humbug. They are curious, irreverent, suspicious of theological values and religious conceptions, torn by loyalities of every sort. This is the campus. And the problem is, how are we to influence this great mass, partly serious, partly frivolous, to appreciate, to understand, to love Jewish religious and cultural values. How are we to stir them so that they may become leaders or useful followers in the Jewish community of to-morrow?

Several organizations have already entered the field. The most inclusive is the Bnai Brith Hillel Foundation, first established at the University of Illinois in 1923. It has already entrenched itself on four campuses in the Middle West and it hopes to extend itself to every campus where there are enough Jewish students to warrant such a thorough organization. Its principle is to create a centre on the campus, close to the student, playing on his religious, intellectual, social and recreational life, interesting him in every field of Jewish activity. The student is met personally, he is met in his group, he is met in the mass. Whatever qualities or interests are latent in him are brought to the surface and an attempt is made to develop them.

The Menorah movement is a much older influence. It does not much concern itself with the religious side of the student except as a phenomenon in modern Jewish life. It aims to study intensively and rationally the problems and interests of the Jewish world. It does not strive to reach all, it is content with small numbers. It was the pioneer in Jewish student activity and it is still the only Jewish influence in the majority of universities.

tions have also been influential, the one providing social activities and making the Jewish student feel at home on the campus, the other organizing religious services in an attempt to give an opportunity to students to express themselves religiously.

The Avukah, successor to the Intercollegiate Zionist Organization, is frankly a Zionist endeavour, studying Jewish problems in relation to Zionism. It is a very recent experiment and its greatest foothold is in the universities of the East. There are other influences not very well organized, usually the personal contacts of rabbis and Jewish leaders in communities who have done splendid work, often against great obstacles. But the field has only superficially been developed. There is ample room for greater activity.

It would be presumptuous of me to outline a programme for the future. The problems to be faced require for their solution more than the personal reactions of any individual. But perhaps my suggestions, briefly classified and dealing with a number of the more important problems, may develop a fruitful discussion and a programme. Certainly we cannot approach a vast student problem without ourselves being clear about what we wish to accomplish. We aim to speak to the student, we wish to interest him in our message. What have we to say? What is our programme?

I shall concern myself largely with the serious minority, growing in number constantly. The Jewish student who comes to a campus because he has no other place to go or because he wishes to play for a few years before going to work is also an important problem and needs a definite programme of mass education. But the subject opens another field of discussion. The fine, thinking minority is my particular problem.

First, then, as to the content of the message to him. It must be linked up with his life. It must be intelligible to him. He is living in a new world, reacting to a new environment. It is useless to come to him crying for a Jewish consciousness, for loyalty to the old faith. Why, the student will ask with provoking regularity: Why a Jewish consciousness? And what do you mean by the old faith? And, unlike Pilate, he will wait for an answer.

The student is the most difficult critic of religious values because he is in a university atmosphere. He comes from classes where he assimilates facts and information. He receives concrete material wherever he turns, in the physics laboratory, in the mathematics lecture, in the language class, even in his discussions on philosophy and literature. He cannot help making comparisons as he listens to a religious discourse that is vague and deals in abstractions. He wants no mere formulas, but definite approaches to fundamental problems. It is fatal to come to him without a programme of religious values in general and Jewish values in particular. He is in the mood to examine the fundamentals of his faith, the richness of his culture, the differences that separate him from his neighbour. And it is desirable that he should be in such a mood. The plastic age of student life is a period in which every kind of intelligent thinking, of earnest searching, should be encouraged.

I have often heard objections to such an approach. The American student, it is said, even the serious student, cannot be fed on such a diet. He is not able to stomach it. He is not bred in the disciplined European culture which develops students with a mature outlook, with the fundamental seriousness, with a Weltanschauung. The American is differently equipped. Only the rarest exception is capable of thinking for himself. Whatever religious stability he has may be unhinged by opening new doubts to him. It is better to coat his loyalty with armour, to strengthen it.

If it is true that he must be treated as a fragile object, then it is largely our own fault. We coddle him. We wrap him in intellectual swaddling clothes. We treat him as a high school boy and expect him to respond as an adult. We amuse him with funny stories. We take third-rate novels of Jewish interest as cross-sections of Jewish life and use them as approaches to our problems. Perhaps if we treated him like a man he would tighten up. He is usually quick to respond to honest influences. And the fact remains that he insists upon digging deeper. The haphazard, patriotic attitude which treats him with platitudes has left him cold. Perhaps an earnest approach, uncovering fundamentals, teaching him why he should be loyal and to what he would be loyal, may produce better results.

But it must be guiding and not goading. The tone of authority cannot be used with advantage to a college group. The teacher, the rabbi, the lecturer, whoever it is who is to extend his influence, should, indeed, come to his subject brim full of enthusiasm, zealous as a crusader to win converts. But his chief aim must be to place at the disposal of the student the material with which he may influence himself. After all, in the fundamental problems of religion, all of us are alike on unfamiliar ground. We speculate, we theorize, we believe. We cannot adopt any air of authority. An official attitude is usually an officious attitude. The late Dr. Eliot introduced a vital idea in the educational field, namely, that of spontaneous, personal interest and enthusiasm, rather than compulsion, as the driving force in education. We ought to accept this principle in teaching religious value to college men and women. Let them grope, let them stumble. We need not be frightened that they will lose their faith. Usually they will remain actively interested in Jewish values. But, at the worst, every progressive in religion would rather have intelligent sceptics than ignorant pietists.

Progressive religion stagnates when it crystallizes too firmly. Let the younger generation develop a religious attitude of its own, which is honest and meets the demands of modern life. We may say of religious values what Santayana said so well of human values: "We commit the blotted manuscript of our lives more willingly to the flames when we find the immortal text half engrossed in a fairer copy." Such an attitude will establish confidence between guide and guided, and, in the long run, there will be more genuine faith based on intelligent investigation.

This brings me to another point of contact with the student, through literature. Every interest which a student has can be vitally stimulated by his reading. Patriotism comes from knowledge of the best in a nation's past and not by ballyhooing about its superiority. Mazzini rebuilt the Italian people by appealing to the youth of his country, through history and literature.

We have learned to teach history in the universities through attractive text books and biographies that stimulate interest, getting away more and more from the stodgy, indigestible German type of a generation ago, crammed with dates and isolated facts. We have learned to introduce even historical novels in history courses. For they make an era vivid and colourful. Scott's Quention Durwood is much more valuable for a student than ten formal lives of Louis XI.

It would be well if we could turn the Jewish student to browse in the Jewish cultural field. But unfortunately at present the feeding is so scanty there. Jewish students who have been stimulated to know more about their past often come for suggestions on what to read. I have had students who were anxious to deal with some Jewish subject. But what books are available for them that are both scholarly and attractive? They may be counted on ten fingers.

The Union has fortunately taken this problem in hand and, through its commission on education, is earnestly trying to develop the field of Jewish history, literature and essays, and fiction. This work must not be a side line, however. It is the one field of supreme importance to-day, open for the initiative of every organization. The influence of a good literature cannot be estimated in numbers. It works subtly, but it often works profoundly. Many a life has been changed by the appeal of a good book.

One final word on the attempt of organizations to do student work. With a problem so difficult it is narrow for any organization to begrudge any other the work which it does. The problem of each is the problem of all. No energy may be wasted. It is sad to think of any institution belittling another because its work on the campus is conducted in a warmly religious spirit or for another institution to belittle the approach that is purely intellectual and does not believe in mass effort. There have been instances where organizations would rather duplicate work already done than allow another to get credit for its efforts. This policy is usually unconsciousness—loyalty to an organization blending it to the larger needs of Jewish life. It ought to be more concerned with the work to be done than with who is to do the work.

The present college generation is an important one to influence. It stands at a turning point in American Jewish history, when old traditions are becoming obsolete and new values are being created. With a good, clear programme, summing up just what there is to be done and with the co-operation of every agency in Jewish life, we may guide our youth and ourselves into a Judaism that is both rational and virile.

EAST KOOTENAY POWER READY TO COMMENCE OPERATING STEAM PLANT

Cranbrook, B.C., July 16.—Mr. P. T. Davies, of the engineering staff of the Power Corporation of Canada, Limited, has returned to Montreal after a tour of inspection of the development work of East Kootenay Power Company, which serves a territory extending from Cranbrook, B.C., to Blairmore, Alta.

East Kootenay has been working on the construction of the Sentinel steam power station on Crow's Nest Lake in Alberta and this has proceeded to the stage where operations will be possible in a few days. This plant was started to increase the capacity of the company's hydro-electric plant, and at the same time insure continuous service at times when water power might be affected by low water. Being in a coal mining district an ample and cheap supply of coal is available for the steam station.

Mr. Davies found that the first unit of 5,000 K.W.H. about ready to begin operations and plant construction is now ready to receive the second unit at any time. This will be required at an early date to meet the increasing demand for power which is steadily developing within the territory served. It was reported that $250,000 of new business was available for the new plant upon completion.

The large power consumers of the district are the various coal mines which comprise the chief industry outside the power supplied to the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company's plant which is the largest single enterprise operating in that section of British Columbia and is rapidly expanding the scope of its operations. For some time back the coal mines suffered from a great deal of labour trouble which seriously curtailed output as well as power consumption. This drawback has been completely overcome and the district is once more prosperous, which is a favourable augury for the earning power of East Kootenay Power Company. It is consequently expected that the current fiscal year, which commenced April 1, will prove the best the company ever had.

LADY HENRY'S WILL ESTABLISHES SCHOLARSHIPS

By the will of Lady Henry, the widow of the late Sir Charles Solomon Henry, a sum approximating a million and a quarter dollars is set aside for scholarships in American Universities for British students and at Oxford and Cambridge for American students. Lady Henry, who died in London from an operation, was the daughter of the late Leonard Lewisohn of New York, who was a prominent figure in religious and cultural work in this country. She was married to Sir Charles in 1892 and made her home in England ever since. She was always interested in promoting good understanding between England and America, and was prominent in many charitable and communal endeavours in England.

ALGONQUIN PARK

Algonquin Park is famous for fun fish and tan. The up-and-at-'em sportsmen know that in this famous sports country they are bound to have the time of their life. It's not a very long trip from Toronto, yet you can't find better fishing anywhere—the bass, lunge and trout are hungry all the time. The lakes and rivers make interesting canoe trips easy to plan—while for fancy or everyday "roughing it," Algonquin Park cannot be beaten.

Highland Inn, Minnesing Camp and Nominigan Camp provide excellent accommodation. Up there you can get equipment, canoes and guides if you wish. Illustrated booklets, fares, reservations, information, etc., may be procured from any Canadian National Agent.

SUMMER TIME SPLENDOR OF PACIFIC COAST ATTRACTS HOST OF TOURISTS

Summer tours to the west are the vogue. More people are planning a trip for this time of the year than ever before and the Pacific Coast and Alaska seem the favourite destination. The coast cities—Vancouver and Victoria—are at their finest; the boat trips through the scenic seas from Vancouver to Prince Rupert and Alaska were never more enjoyable. From the ships the view of mountains, of cliffs, of glaciers and forests prove an unending source of novel entertainment.

You will never forget Alaska, "Land of the Midnight Sun," with its vivid scenery, its sparkling days and majestic nights.

On the way to the coast, or returning, wonderful Jasper National Park will hold your attention for a few days—a pleasing interlude in the unforgettable journey to the coast.

Any Canadian National Railways Agent will gladly give all the information you desire besides helping to arrange your itinerary, reservations, etc.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE LOW-PRICED SUMMER TOURIST FARES

See the Places You Longed to Visit

Summer tourist fares are now in effect. You can take a trip to the interesting places in Canada at greatly reduced rates. Plan to visit Jasper National Park this summer. See the wonderful North Pacific Coast, the giant mountain country of British Columbia, Alaska or the interesting Maritimes. Now is a very comfortable season for travel—and its lower cost adds another good reason for planning a present season trip.

Any agent of Canadian National Railways will supply you with literature and full information regarding the different tours and their cost.

TIMAGAMI FOR FISHING

Have a regular holiday this year. Gather your gear together, pack your duffle and board the train for any of the fine resorts and camping territories scattered about Timagami. Up in these northern woods you can have the kind of holiday you like best. Either "rough it" with tent and canoe, frying pan and camp fire—or have a fine vacation at the several modern hotels that provide home-like accommodations with all the thrill and atmosphere of the great woods.

Fishing, canoeing, camera hunting, loafing—you can do them all well at Timagami. Ask any Canadian National Agent for illustrated booklets and full information.
